The Consortium of Jewish Day Schools (CoJDS) is dedicated to the empowerment, development, and improvement of Jewish day schools across North America promoting best practices using Torah values as our guide. Established in 2002 as a collaborative union among Day School principals, CoJDS today encompasses educators from many schools across the U.S. and Canada, providing a powerful forum for continuous collaboration towards the realization of mutual goals, training programs, and events. CoJDS provides financial incentives and subsidies, and an amalgam of formal and informal endeavors which together empower Day School administrators towards the achievement of excellence in their roles of educational leadership.

The Consortium works in partnership with schools to formulate and apply an individualized support system tailored to each institution’s distinctive character. CoJDS has developed a variety of approaches for the assessment, evaluation, and definition of a day school’s particular needs, as well as the resources necessary to facilitate and fulfill those objectives. CoJDS programs include: Judaic studies skills based curricula with computer generated reports; Job-Embedded Mentoring Program (JEM), which enables graduates of our Principals’ Training Institute (PTI) to receive advanced coaching from experienced principals; student recruitment and marketing initiatives including financial incentives to attract new families; regional and national conferences for staff professional development; standardized assessment tools to aid data driven instruction; a national speakers bureau; edtech assistance for schools; school visitations and follow-up guidance; principal placement; peer support and networking opportunities; and teacher training directed toward the staffing of Judaic teachers in smaller communities. Our L’havin U’lehaskil Chumash Curriculum is currently used in over 150 day schools in North America, Panama, England, and Australia, by nearly 7,000 students annually.

CoJDS participant schools range from fledgling community schools to multi-campus institutions, from newly-formed enterprises to decades-old establishments, in small towns and major cities across the continent. The principals and heads of schools of affiliated institutions contribute their unique talents while simultaneously benefiting from the personal and professional experience of their fellow administrators, forging a cooperative construct of knowledge and expertise that ultimately serves to enhance the professional, managerial, social, and scholastic success of the Jewish Day Schools, its educators, and lay leadership.
